PREFACE

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons the twenty-ninth volume of the Birmingham City Directory. It has been the aim of the publishers to make the Birmingham Directory a medium to display the progress the city is making in business and population.

There is no publication connected with the city that so completely exhibits the industrial, commercial and other industries than the City Directory. In the alphabetical list, names of all inhabitants over a certain age are taken, giving the most reliable data for estimating the population. The classified departments show a complete exhibit of the various kinds of business and the extent to which it is represented. The miscellaneous, the condition of the government, churches, societies, etc., and the advertising department the energy and enterprise in the business circles, not only to exploit their individual interest, but establish the fact that they are interested in the progress of the city. Cities where newspapers and other kindred representative publications are well represented in their advertising department are regarded as being thriving and growing communities.

Directory Library.

A Directory Library, to be supplied with annual issues of directories of leading cities has been established by the publishers at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, for the free use of the public. This library will be maintained at the expense of the publishers. In exchange for these directories copies of the Birmingham Directory will be exchanged, placing the Birmingham Directory in the libraries of all cities represented. The advantage to be derived by the City of Birmingham from this is apparent.

Growth of Birmingham as Shown by Population.

Founded in 1871.
Population in 1880	3,086
Population in 1890	26,178
Population in 1900	38,415
Population in 1910	132,685

(Directory estimate January 1st, 1914, 189,134.)

A CITY OF PROGRESS.

Birmingham, Alabama, widely known as "The City of Pay Rolls," is the geographical center of the Progressive New South.

Less than half a century old, and growing faster than any other Southern city, the population in 1910 had reached 132,685, and according to the 1914 City Directory has grown to 189,134; so it is obvious that the marvelous growth is not of a mushroom variety, but is a steady, substantial increase.

Birmingham is destined to be the leading industrial city of the South. It is peculiarly situated in the very center of a wonderful district where every element necessary for the making of iron is found in close proximity, which gives it advantages not enjoyed by other iron-making centers.

The leading industries of Birmingham are products of iron and steel, heavy machinery, cast iron pipe, brick and other clay products, cement and diversified industries of every description, which are increasing at a rapid pace due to the natural advantages and wonderful resources of the district.

The following nine railroad systems radiate from Birmingham to every section of the country: The Alabama Great Southern, Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, Central of Georgia, Frisco, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, Mobile and Ohio, Seaboard Air Line and Southern, thus affording unusual transportation facilities. There are ninety-six passenger trains in and out of the city daily. The two-million-dollar terminal station adequately and conveniently cares for thousands of travelers daily.

There are numerous hotels and boarding houses in the city, and with the completion of the two million-dollar hotels now under construction, the tourist who enters the gates of Birmingham will be assured of every comfort.

The business section, with its wide streets and sidewalks, lighted by a modern "white way" system, is second to none in attractiveness. The attractive shops and the hustle that is obvious on every side remind one forcibly of a city like Chicago.

Birmingham's residence section is one of its greatest assets. The beautiful homes built along the mountain side, which is reached by winding roads-ways, afford views which are not surpassed by the mountains of any land.

The climate of Birmingham is devoid of extremes of heat and cold. Short winters and long summers make it possible to engage in outdoor sports practically all the year round.

The school facilities of Birmingham are the very best. There are several colleges of high repute, five high schools and six elementary schools. These afford educational facilities of the highest order.

Twenty parks scattered throughout the city afford recreation for all classes. The city maintains a well organized playground association.

The housing conditions of Birmingham for the working men are being rapidly improved, and in some industrial sections they have already been made ideal.

Birmingham is governed by three commissioners, whose motto is efficiency. The installation of motor-driven fire apparatus instead of horses is an example of the practical work being done. There has been a great saving of expenditures under the new administration, with no sacrifice of efficiency.

Birmingham is a combination of the city industrial and the city beautiful, which entitles it to the name of the "Ideal American City."

Population.

The standard measurement of any city's success and prosperity is the increase in its population. This issue of the Birmingham City Directory contains 68,776 individual names. By using a multiple of two and three-fourths (most cities use three), to allow for women and children whose names have not been included, a population of 189,134 is indicated.

As in former years, the canvass for names did not stop at the city limits proper, but embraces the immediate suburbs between which and Birmingham there exists merely the artificial boundary of imaginary lines.

In conclusion, we wish to extend our thanks to the business men of the city for their liberal patronage and to the public in general for their co-operation in furnishing the necessary data to the name-takers and canvassers.

Respectfully,

R. L. POLK & CO., Publishers.
